The test proctor will review this sheet before candidates exit the exam site. Candidates will indicate any questions on this sheet of paper that they would like to challenge by circling the question during the written examination.

Demonstrated Practical or Interview

Candidate passing the written examination with a 70% or better will be eligible to participate in the demonstrated practical or interview. MAA will validate all candidate answers to determine who is eligible for the demonstrated practical or interview.

The demonstrated practical or interview panel will be a diverse group based on race and/or gender who are the same rank or higher than the classification being evaluated. Management will attempt to have the panel members consist of both internal and external members. The panel is responsible for ensuring that the practical or interview evaluations are consistent, accurate, and in line with the desired outcomes per the evaluation criteria submitted and approved.

The demonstrated practical or interview will constitute 50% of the candidate's final score. The demonstrated practical or interview is not limited to a certain number of questions. The candidate must obtain at least 70% on the demonstrated practical or interview to appear on the Ranked Selection list.

The candidate cannot protest demonstrated practical or interview scores.

Challenging Questions

MAA HR will provide the answers to the written examination the following day via email. Candidates can then grade their answer sheet to determine if there are any answers in which they would like to protest. A published written protest date will be provided to candidates.

The union will identify a member of their local to serve as a representative for each classification listed. The representative must be of equal or higher rank to the position being tested for. The representative must be identified before the written exam is given. A member of MAA HR and Fire & Rescue management along with the union representative will review the examination question (s) being protested. Candidates will provide the designated group mentioned above the questions in which they would like to protest by the published written protest date. The candidate will receive written receipt from MAA HR.

At the conclusion of the written question protest period, MAA HR will email the results to all candidates who took the written examination. The email will contain all questions protested and the final disposition. If an answer reviewed is deemed to be incorrect all applicant scores will be adjusted. For example, the correct answer to a question was originally thought to be A, but after the question protest review it was determined that B is the correct answer. A point will be deducted for all candidates who selected A and a point will be given to all candidates who selected B.
