Bullying in the Workplace
State of Maryland Policy

Non Managers/Supervisors Training
Revised Policy, 2018
Purpose of the Refresher Training on Workplace Bullying

Recall the concept of workplace bullying: what it is and what it is not.

Recall how to prevent workplace bullying and take an active role in stopping it.

Recall the ways in which an employee, whether victim or witness, may report an incident of workplace bullying.
What is Workplace Bullying?

- Intentional, persistent, malicious, unwelcome, severe or pervasive conduct that harms, intimidates, offends, degrades or humiliates an employee.

- May be verbal (including written or electronic) or physical, at the place of work or in the course of employment.

- Behavior that a reasonable person would find to be hostile, offensive, and not related to an employer’s legitimate business interest.
And What is NOT Workplace Bullying?

A single incident of unreasonable behavior – generally, bullying conduct is persistent

Disciplinary action taken in accordance with law, regulation or policy

Routine coaching and counseling including feedback and correction of work performance or conduct

Exercising management’s prerogatives – such as promoting, transferring, assigning work, etc.

Individual differences in styles of personal expressions that may lead to conflict – as long as it is not meant to intimidate

Having differences of opinion on work-related concerns

If I Report Bullying to a Manager, What Must They Do?

- It is the duty of every manager and supervisor to immediately report to the appointing authority:
  - Any incident of bullying witnessed by the manager or supervisor themselves
  - Any incident of bullying brought to his/her attention by another employee
What Can Managers Do to Help Prevent Bullying?

- Communicate effectively and engage workers in decision-making
- Manage difficult conversations and provide constructive feedback
- Manage conflicts that arise
- Effectively manage workloads and performance
- Practice diversity and tolerance
Even If I’m Not a Manager, Can I Help Prevent Bullying?

Yes, you can!

Be aware that bullying can occur at all levels of your organization – not just superior to subordinate but also peer to peer.

Contribute to an open, respectful environment.

Be aware of the Bullying Policy and complete your trainings on the Policy, including refresher courses every two years.

If you see something, say something, even anonymously!
Do I Need a Specific Form to Make a Report?

- No, you don’t!
- Your agency may have a form they would prefer you to use.
- However, employees may report bullying incidents in any manner, whether in writing or in person or any other reasonable manner they find comfortable.
- Managers and supervisors MUST act on a bullying report, regardless of how it is reported.
A manager or supervisor must immediately report all bullying incidents to the appointing authority.

When Should I Report Bullying to My Supervisor or Manager?

Report to your supervisor if you are a victim of bullying NOT due to:

- Age, Ancestry, Color, Creed,
- Gender Identity & Expression, Genetic Information,
- Marital Status, Mental or Physical Disability,
- National Origin, Race, Religious Affiliation, Belief or Opinion,
- Sex, Sexual Orientation, or any other protected status
When Should I Report Bullying to the EEO Officer Instead?

File a written complaint with the EEO officer or head of the principal unit if you are a victim of bullying that IS due to:

- Age, Ancestry, Color, Creed,
- Gender Identity & Expression, Genetic Information,
- Marital Status, Mental or Physical Disability,
- National Origin, Race, Religious Affiliation, Belief or Opinion,
- Sex, Sexual Orientation, or any other protected status
How Must My Manager Respond to My Complaint?

The appointing authority or designee must investigate the complaint in the following manner:

1. Meet with the complainant in a confidential setting to collect information
2. Ask whether there were any witnesses to the incident(s)
3. Consider any documentary evidence the complainant may provide
4. Explain the next steps to the complainant
5. Meet with any witnesses
6. Meet with the employee alleged to be the bully and explain the allegations
Can Employees Be Disciplined for Bullying Others?

- Yes, they can.
- Managers and supervisors will take the following steps:

1. Consider any mitigating circumstances the bullying employee offers
2. Determine the appropriate disciplinary action to be imposed, if any
3. Give the bullying employee a written notice of the disciplinary action and their appeal rights
Can I Be Reassigned If I Am Bullied?

- Yes, you can request that you be reassigned if you are bullied.
- Management may also consider reassigning the bullying employee.
- Neither option is guaranteed, but is management’s prerogative.
- Reassignment is not a form of discipline.
What If the Behavior Isn’t Bullying?

- Poor workplace conduct and behavior is not necessarily bullying.
- Remember that one incident alone is not bullying.
- Regardless, an investigation should still take place and any reasonable steps should be taken to try to solve the problems.
Will I Get a Written Decision on My Complaint, and Can I Appeal?

Regardless of the outcome of the bullying investigation, the complainant should receive a written decision that addresses:

• The complaint itself
• The steps taken to address it
• Information that supports the outcome

If an employee believes the Bullying Policy was misinterpreted or misapplied in their case, they may:

• File a grievance within 20 days of receiving the written decision
• In accordance with State Personnel & Pensions Article, Title 12
Can I Be Retaliated Against for Making a Bullying Complaint?

- Retaliation against any employee who files a report about bullying, or is a witness to bullying and reports it or testifies to it, is strictly prohibited.

- Any employee who harasses or intimidates another employee who has reported bullying behavior in the workplace may be subjected to disciplinary action, up to and including termination from State service.
