Bullying in the Workplace
State of Maryland Policy

Training for Supervisors & Managers
Revised Policy, 2018
General Intent of the State’s Bullying Policy

To educate all employees about bullying in the workplace and ensure it is not tolerated

To show bullying will be dealt with in the appropriate manner

To show that imposition of discipline, up to and including termination from State service, may occur
Bullying Is a Problem in the Workplace

- Studies suggest that as many as a quarter to one-half of the American workforce has experienced or observed workplace bullying.

- Even one victim of workplace bullying is too many in the State of Maryland’s workforce.
Objectives of this Course

- To define workplace bullying: what it is and what it is not
- To show how to prevent workplace bullying and take an active role in stopping it
- To demonstrate the ways in which an employee, whether victim or witness, may report an incident of workplace bullying
So, what is workplace bullying?

- Intentional, persistent, malicious, unwelcome, severe or pervasive conduct that harms, intimidates, offends, degrades or humiliates an employee.

- May be verbal (including written or electronic) or physical, at the place of work or in the course of employment.

- Behavior that a reasonable person would find to be hostile, offensive, and not related to an employer’s legitimate business interests.
What are some specific examples of workplace bullying?

- Personal attacks (angry outbursts, excessive profanity, or name-calling)
- Personal insults and use of offensive nicknames
- Public humiliation
- Encouragement of others to turn against the targeted employee
- Spreading rumors and gossip about the targeted employee
- Being unjustifiably offensive toward fellow employees, wards of the State, or the public
- Sabotage of a coworker’s work product or undermining of an employee’s work performance
- Threats of abuse to an individual or an individual’s property (defacing or marking up property)
- Repeated infliction of verbal abuse, such as the use of derogatory remarks, insults and epithets
- Making threats about job security without foundation
How can a supervisor or manager prevent workplace bullying?

There are many things that a supervisor or manager can do to prevent workplace bullying, for example:

- Foster an environment of inclusion
- Emphasize the importance of teamwork over individual accomplishment
- Be a good role model
- Practice good listening skills
- Maintain awareness of the quality of the relationships between coworkers

Now that I know what bullying is, what is it NOT?

- A single incident of unreasonable behavior – generally, bullying conduct is persistent
- Disciplinary action taken in accordance with law, regulation or policy
- Routine coaching and counseling including feedback and correction of work performance or conduct
- Exercising management’s prerogatives – such as promoting, transferring, assigning work, etc.
- Individual differences in styles of personal expressions that may lead to conflict – as long as it is not meant to intimidate
- Having differences of opinion on work-related concerns
Management’s Responsibilities

- It is the duty of every manager and supervisor to immediately report to the appointing authority:
  - Any incident of bullying witnessed by the manager or supervisor themselves
  - Any incident of bullying brought to his/her attention by another employee
Preventing Workplace Bullying Starts with the Supervisor…

Supervisors play a key role in developing and fostering productive and respectful workplace relationships. Some ways of doing so include:

1. Communicating effectively and engaging workers in decision-making
2. Managing difficult conversations and providing constructive feedback
3. Managing conflicts that arise
4. Effectively managing workloads and performance
5. Practicing diversity and tolerance
What else should I remember?

- Remember that bullying of any sort is not tolerated in the workplace.
- Be aware that bullying can occur at all levels of your organization – not just superior to subordinate but also peer to peer,
- Be aware of the Bullying Policy and complete your trainings on the Policy, including refresher courses every two years.
- Foster an open, respectful environment.

The Complaint Process

The complaint process for addressing workplace bullying depends upon the nature of the complaint.

- An employee who feels he or she has been the victim of bullying that is not because of the individual’s age, ancestry, color, creed, gender identity and expression, genetic information, marital status, mental or physical disability, national origin, race, religious affiliation, belief or opinion, sex, sexual orientation or any other protected status, should file a complaint with the employee’s appointing authority or agency head/Secretary, as appropriate.
Reporting a Complaint

- It is essential that employees feel comfortable reporting any bullying incidents.
- As such, there is NO specific form or manner by which an incident must be reported.
- Although an agency may create a form if desired, managers and supervisors MAY NOT fail to address a complaint based on the lack of or incorrect completion of a form.
- Employees may report bullying incidents in any manner they choose, whether in writing or in person or any other reasonable manner that is comfortable for them.
  - Therefore, managers and supervisors MAY NOT fail to act on a bullying report because of the manner in which it is reported.
How does a Manager Respond to a Complaint?

- The appointing authority or their designee shall investigate the complaint as follows:

1. Meet with the complainant in a confidential setting to collect information.
2. Ask whether there were any witnesses to the incident(s).
3. Consider any documentary evidence the complainant may provide.
4. Explain the next steps to the complainant.
5. Meet with any witnesses.
6. Meet with the employee alleged to be the bully and explain the allegations.
What if Bullying is Confirmed?

- If the investigation results in a finding of bullying, the appointing authority or their designee shall:
  - Consider any mitigating circumstances
  - Determine the appropriate disciplinary action to be imposed, if any
  - Give the bullying employee a written notice of the disciplinary action and their appeal rights
Disciplinary Timeframes

- Just like any other situation in which discipline is imposed, the timeframes outlined in State Personnel & Pensions Article §11-106 apply:
  - Investigation and disciplinary action must take place within 30 days of gaining knowledge of the bullying incident
  - EXCEPT that if a suspension without pay is to be imposed, it must be imposed no later than 5 workdays following the close of the employee’s next shift after the appointing authority acquires knowledge of the misconduct
  - Be aware of the special rules for exempt employees.
Can reassignments be a remedy?

Yes, the appointing authority can consider reassignment in addition to or in lieu of discipline.

The complainant can be reassigned if he or she requests it and it is appropriate.

The bully can be reassigned if management finds it appropriate.

Reassignment is not a disciplinary action; it is management’s prerogative.
What if the behavior isn’t bullying?

• As discussed, poor workplace conduct and behavior is not necessarily bullying

• If the behavior does not rise to the level of bullying, the investigating individual should still determine whether there are other issues to be addressed and take the appropriate action to do so
Written Decisions & Grievances

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Regardless of the outcome of the bullying investigation, the complainant should receive a written decision that addresses:</th>

<tr>
<th>If an employee believes the Bullying Policy was misinterpreted or misapplied in their case, they may:</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>• File a grievance within 20 days of receiving the written decision</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• In accordance with State Personnel &amp; Pensions Article, Title 12</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
What else should I remember?

- Any employee who has committed a violation of the Bullying Policy is required to participate in retraining on bullying.
- The investigating person who takes part in this process in any capacity should be sure to document every step.

Complaint Process: Protected Status Basis

An employee who feels he or she has been the victim of bullying because of the individual’s age, ancestry, color, creed, gender identity and expression, genetic information, marital status, mental or physical disability, national origin, race, religious affiliation, belief or opinion, sex, sexual orientation or any other protected status, has options for filing a complaint. The employee may:

- File the complaint in writing with the head of the principal unit or the EEO Officer within 30 days, or
- Contact the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission or the Maryland Commission on Civil Rights to file a complaint
Any individual who witnesses bullying behaviors should report it without delay to his or her appointing authority or agency head/Secretary, as appropriate.

Let employees know that reports of bullying behavior will be taken very seriously and there will be no ramifications for making a good faith report.

A witness may make the report anonymously.
Retaliation is Prohibited

- Retaliation against any employee who files a report about bullying, or is a witness to bullying and reports it or testifies to it, is strictly prohibited.

- Any employee who harasses or intimidates another employee who has reported bullying behavior in the workplace may be subjected to disciplinary action, up to and including termination from State service.

Supervisors and managers should be aware of the importance of keeping good records concerning incidents of workplace bullying.

Documenting any complaints and the subsequent investigation or inquiry, including any action taken (including, but not limited to: training or retraining of staff, reassignment, counseling, or disciplinary action) is a critical step in maintaining a detailed history of complaints.

Your HR Office will share data on complaints with the Department of Budget and Management for the purpose of maintaining Statewide statistics and pinpointing specific problem locations.
